July 28, 2015

This document describes the Official Rules that govern how the ACM MobiCom 2015 Mobile App Competition will be run. The competition will hereafter be referred to as the “Contest”. As pertains to these rules, “we,” “our,” and “us” refer to the MobiCom 2015 Organizing Committee. “You” and “your” refer to an eligible Contest applicant. The contest is open to all European, US and International participants including undergraduate and graduate students, researchers and practitioners. Contest Finalists (as defined below in section 3.1) are required to register and attend the conference in order to be considered as eligible by the Contest jury for first, second and third place winners. The finalists will be allowed to register at the «Early-Registration» fee, even if the deadline for early registration has passed.

1. CONTEST DESCRIPTION

The Contest is for novel and innovative mobile applications utilizing any computing architecture (stand-alone, client/server, client/proxy/server, peer-to-peer/ad-hoc, cloud/mobile, others). This is a platform-neutral contest. Applications can be developed for, but are not limited to, Android, iOS, Windows Phone, Blackberry OS 10 and HTML5. All applications must be demonstrated on real devices and on off-the-shelf operating systems, i.e., the phone should not be jailbroken or rooted. Bonus points will be assigned to apps that can be directly downloaded from an app store. Network services that are part of the application should also embody real services, with no mock-up components.

Each mobile application created and submitted in this Contest will be called an "entry". All entries will be screened for eligibility, and those which are innovative entries will be invited to enter the Contest. Section 6 describes what constitutes an eligible entry. All invited entries received will be judged using the criteria described in section 3 to determine qualification as finalists. A Jury of the Finalists will further judge the entries after considering live demonstrations during the MobiCom 2014 conference before determining the three top winners.

We are not responsible for entries that we do not receive, for any reason; nor for entries that we receive but are not decipherable, for any reason. In particular, we are not responsible for lost, corrupted, illegible or delayed entries or for network, computer, hardware or software failures of any kind which may restrict or delay the sending or receipt of your entry.

A successful application will meet an important need and may be part of a sustainable business.

How unique and original is your application idea? How well does your application compete against any competitors? How does your application make innovative usage of the mobile platform to meet users’ needs?

3.3.3 Quality of User Experience

Does the application have clear user experience goals and well-defined user scenarios? How polished and visually appealing is your application’s user interface? Is the user interface responsive? Are errors handled gracefully?

3.3.4 Definition and Business Viability

How does your application fit into a business model for meeting your users’ needs? At the stage of the final competition, does your Live Presentation convince the judges that you’ve got a great project and a clear market opportunity?
