Call For Papers

MobiSys 2010 will continue the tradition of publishing top-notch research papers dealing with all aspects of mobile systems. MobiSys seeks papers that take a broad systems perspective rather than focus narrowly on low-level components. The conference values results and insights obtained from working implementations more highly than those obtained solely from simulations. If you have any questions regarding relevance or other submission-related issues, please contact the program chairs at mobisys_pcchairs@acm.org.

Topics of interest include, but are not limited to:

- Tools for building and measuring mobile systems,
- Software architectures for mobile devices,
- Infrastructure support for node mobility,
- System-level energy management for mobile devices,
- Data management for mobile applications and systems,
- Operating systems for mobile devices,
- Support for mobile social networking and mobile Web 2.0,
- Security and privacy in mobile systems,
- Wearable computing and innovative mobile devices,
- Systems for location determination, context sensing and context awareness,
- Mobile computing support for pervasive computing,
- Mobile technologies for energy conservation and monitoring,
- Vehicular wireless systems,
- Innovative mobile and mobile sensing applications,
- Experience with mobile applications, networks and systems,
- User interfaces and usability issues for mobile applications and systems,
- Personal-area networks and systems,
- Cyber foraging and resource discovery for mobile system
